Arta Fashion and Apparel (AF&A) on Friday said it will set up a new subsidiary to foray into the direct-to-consumer (D2C) space.

The board of directors of AF&A in their meeting on Friday gave approval for the new subsidiary to focus on building a portfolio of distinct digital brands in fashion, lifestyle and other allied life categories.

The new venture will initially be run through AF&A's existing assets and at a later time, AF&A may bring in external investments to accelerate the journey, the company said in its release.

Other than providing capital, AF&A's support is built around strong operational expertise where it will utilise its experience and capabilities to scale up this portfolio, the release further said.

The newly created entity will initially incubate and promote promising and scalable brands.

The company's entry into the D2C space comes at a time when the D2C market is expected to touch $100 billion by 2025.

AF&A will now accelerate its process of building a D2C framework and tap into its talent for its subsidiary. It will also tap into the broader ecosystem and collaborate effectively with its service partners, tech providers, digital marketing agencies to scale its business rapidly, the release said.

ArcelorMittal's €1.7-bn deal with France signals its push for more green energy

REUTERS
Paris, February 4

STEELMAKER ARCELORMITTAL SAID the French government would support its green transition efforts which include investments in two sites in northern France, worth €1.7 billion ($1.95 billion).

The company's latest projects come as French President Emmanuel Macron's government looks to step up investments in northern France - traditionally an industrial heartland of the country - ahead of April's presidential election. Two of ArcelorMittal's steelmaking sites in Fos-sur-Mer and Dunkirk, both situated in the north of France, will be transformed while maintaining equivalent production capacities.

In Fos-sur-Mer, the company plans to install an Electric Arc Furnace, using the electric power grid rather than coal while in Dunkirk, ArcelorMittal is banking on hydrogen, combined with an electric furnace.

The investment will contribute to achieving the goal of reducing carbon emissions from producing steel by close to 40% by 2030.

The move "put France's steelmaking industry on the path of the Paris Agreement", the company said, referring to a multilateral agreement signed between 195 countries in 2015 to limit man-made global warming.
